Form 990, Part III, Line 4a - Program Service Accomplishments

Our science program is comprised of the snowy plover program, waterbird program and landbird programs. The Snowy Plover Recovery Program works toward the recovery of the federally threatened Western Snowy Plover. Biologists monitor Snowy Plover populations by surveying salt ponds of the San Francisco Bay where the birds breed. Program biologists work closely with local land managers and restoration projects to implement management practices to help increase the Snowy Plover population in the Bay. The Waterbird Monitoring Program collects crucial data on the population ecology of San Francisco Bay Area waterbirds. Program biologists, along with approximately 70 volunteers, monitor breeding waterbird colonies, collect data on waterbird distribution, and document disease outbreaks. These data are especially effective in tracking trends in our local bird populations and helping to guide wetland restoration in the Bay Area. At our research station, the Coyote Creek Field Station, our Landbird Program uses the science of bird banding to track avian response to climate change, and document long-term demographic trends that are imperative to conserving and restoring riparian habitats. Our Landbird Program biologists are also working with burrowing owl conservation projects in collaboration with local and federal agencies. Much of our volunteer work was disrupted by the 2020 pandemic as we were unable to use in person volunteers between much of March and December.

Form 990, Part III, Line 4c - Program Service Accomplishments

Our Outreach Program connects people with our mission to achieve a greater understanding of avian conservation and science in their community. We also participate in region-wide efforts to compile long-term datasets to guide restoration and conservation planning efforts, and conduct monitoring projects to assess the effect of prescribed burns on grassland bird communities. We also lead outreach events (sometimes in collaboration with other organizations) in the field, at environmental fairs, at libraries, at the Coyote Creek Field Station, and by invitation to teach children and adults about the scientific method and local wildlife. During the 2020 pandemic, we pioneered some online programs to bring Science talks to the public through our Birdy Hour programs, which reached thousands of people. We also partnered with Marshmallow Minds, another nonprofit, to bring virtual STEM education elementary school kids. We offer opportunities for the general public to be involved in scientific research by participating as citizen scientists in our scientific and habitat programs. Much of our volunteer work was disrupted due to the 2020 pandemic.
